OSURA Storms the Field: Fall Kick-Off
Contributed by Terri Tower

Fifty-five OSURA members stormed the field at Reser Stadium as part of our Fall Kick-Off event on September 14, emerging through the same locker room doors that Beaver football players use when they enter the field during game days.

Our storming speed may have been somewhat slower than the team’s, however. Maybe more of a vigorous saunter.

The locker room and playing field were the final stops on our serpentine tour of the 100,000 square foot Valley Football Center, which underwent a major expansion and renovation completed in 2017. Our group had convened an hour earlier in the impressive window-wall entryway and proceeded from there to our first (and only) sit-down stop in the spacious auditorium with its XXXL size seats.

As I entered the nearly-empty atrium of the Kelley Engineering Center on Saturday of Labor Day weekend to interview Gideon Alegado, I found him playing the OSU Alma Mater on the baby grand piano. It turns out that Gideon plays piano by ear and enjoys playing hymns and oldies. He also plays the guitar and has played the bugle, cornet, trumpet and baritone horn in the past. And for years now, Gideon is also the opening musical entertainer of the yearly Holiday Market sponsored and hosted by the MU Craft Center in the MU Ballroom on the first Friday of December.

There we heard from student athlete Rodney Williams, a senior wrestler from Hawaii. Rodney described his experiences and challenges as both student and athlete, talking about the kinds of support that had helped him survive and succeed - including tutoring, classes, internships, mentors, coaches and involvement with the Student Athlete Advisory Committee (SAAC). He graduates this year with a degree in Construction Engineering.

Our tour leaders Carlos Garcia and Presley Savarino, both from the Athletic Department’s marketing staff, guided us from the auditorium past a multitude of specialized rooms to the comfortable players’ lounge. From there we descended by stairs and elevator to the lowest level of the Center where the equipment and locker rooms are located.

The football team had left earlier in the day for the away game at Nevada, and yes, the locker room was clean. And big. Really big. Carlos pointed out that the OSU football program now has one of the largest locker rooms in the country, spanning the 53 yard width of the football field.

From the Reser stadium field, our undaunted OSURA members exited by climbing up the steep ramp that visiting teams now use for access to the stadium. By the time we arrived at the LaSells Stewart Center for dinner, most of us were ready to collapse into chairs and enjoy the delicious meal provided by University Catering.

Our dinner speaker, Kimya Massey, highlighted the components of “Everyday Champions,” a student athlete development program based on a holistic approach to student success. Kimya, the Senior Associate Athletic Director for Student Athlete Development, described many of the personal and professional development opportunities available for student athletes - internships, special classes, mentoring, leadership development, community service, career planning, clubs and more.

The Fall Kick-Off was a joint effort of OSURA’s Board and Program Committee. Special thanks to Ray Brooks for setting up the football center tour, arranging tour guides, and recruiting the student and staff speakers.
President’s Message
By Chris Mathews

Greetings from OSURA 2018-19 President Chris Mathews,

As another academic year begins, it is a pleasure to greet members and friends of OSURA as your President for 2018-2019. Kate Mathews and I are both long-time members of OSURA. Strangely, neither Kate nor I can remember when we joined. Kate retired in 1998 from Environmental and Molecular Toxicology, and I retired in 2002 from Biochemistry and Biophysics. We must have joined shortly after my retirement.

Kate and I have both been active in service programs of OSURA. We especially like helping at the Career Fairs, because volunteers always get a nice lunch, and the students always look so appreciative of the small help we provide. I have taught a colloquium course in the Honors College for many years, and occasionally a student from my course will come in. They always look surprised to see one of their instructors wearing a big smile and a funny orange shirt.

The OSURA Program Committee is planning a series of great activities this year, beginning with the Fall Startup.

Kate and I are long-time season ticket holders in women’s basketball and gymnastics, so we fit right into OSURA event programming. Having dinner together with fellow OSURA members followed by a presentation by one of the coaches does enhance the experience of watching the game/meet. We look forward to the annual OSURA events associated with sporting events.

During the forthcoming year we will continue our traditional activities—pressing the Administration to recognize retired staff commensurately with retired faculty, improving our contacts with new retirees to seek their membership, offering information about retired living to those colleagues new to retirement, selecting excellent students for financial support through OSURA scholarships, finding ways to be of service to our university, and putting on a series of educational and enjoyable programs for our members.

On behalf of my fellow officers and committee chairs, welcome to OSURA 2018-19.

Chris Mathews
OSURA President
2018-2019

Gideon was born in 1942 in the Philippines. He was raised by his foster parents, both ordained Protestant ministers who established and served many churches in the southern region of Mindanao, and founded Gingoog Institute in 1946. Gideon finished his high school education at Gingoog Institute (now Gingoog Christian College) and graduated from Silliman University (a Presbyterian-founded institution in central Philippines) with a BA in Socio-Anthropology. In 1974 he and his wife Rachel came to OSU where Gideon earned his MS in College Student Services Administration while serving as hall director of Wilson Hall for his assistantship. Rachel earned her MS in Public Health Administration. Their son Gideon II was born in 1975 in Corvallis and lives and works in Kent, WA with his wife, Katrina, their 13-year-old son (Gideon III), and 10-year-old daughter (Kitana Skye).

In 1976 Gideon returned to Silliman University where he served in various administrative, management and instructional positions. In 1980 he and Rachel came back to OSU where he earned his PhD in Adult Education with minors in Gerontology and Student Services. Their daughter Garnet was born in Corvallis in 1982 and now works and lives with her husband Chris Hayes in Vancouver, WA.

While working on his doctorate, Gideon began working as assistant night manager for the OSU Memorial Union. He just kept working his way up through various positions in the MU and became its building manager in 1997. He retired from that position in 2008. He served on the OSURA Board from 2009-2011 while also serving as President of Gingoog Christian College where he is currently President Emeritus and Vice-President for External Affairs. While at OSU, Gideon re-organized the Filipino-American Student Association which has become popularly known as Isang Bansang Pilipino (IBP) which means “One Filipino Nation.” He served as its adviser until his retirement. He and Rachel also founded the Silliman University Alumni Association, Pacific Northwest Chapter in 1997. At that same year, they reactivated the Willamette Valley Filipino Association where Gideon served as president until 2001. He helped to organize the Council of Filipino American Associations in Oregon and Southwestern Washington where he serves currently as a trustee.

Gideon remains active after his retirement. In 2013 he was invited by the Board of Trustees of his high school Alma Mater, Gingoog Christian College, to serve as its president. He served as President of the Silliman University Alumni Council of North America from 2013-2015. He is currently an elder in First Presbyterian Church and also serves on the Advisory Council of the Asian & Pacific Cultural Center. He kicks off the annual OSU Holiday Market each year by playing Christmas tunes on the piano, welcoming everyone to the MU and introducing the MU Craft Center staff who host the event every first weekend in December.

Once, while on a Boy Scout gathering with different troops, the official bugler inadvertently forgot to bring his bugle, to the dismay and disappointment of the scoutmaster. One of the officers approached him and mentioned that he knew of another boy who could play the bugle (or trumpet) even without the instrument. When Gideon was called to play, the somewhat perplexed scoutmaster could not believe what he saw and heard: Gideon playing the “Taps” using only his lips and cupped hands!

He also related the story of making a grown man cry. He was playing the MU grand piano in the lounge one day when an old man asked him if he could play the tune that was played at his (and his wife’s) wedding several years ago. Gideon then began to play some wedding songs that he knew and when he got to play “Because,” the old man exclaimed, “That’s it!” When Gideon played and sang that song, he heard the gentleman sobbing behind him. It turned out his beloved wife had died a few months ago, and he felt he had no joy in life any more, becoming recluse; in fact, he said he only came out because he was a recipient of an OSU award. Hearing that tune which was played at their wedding turned his life around! He later asked Gideon about making a donation to OSU, so Gideon put him in touch with the head of the OSU Foundation which resulted in a sizable donation!

OSU is very fortunate to have such a capable ambassador in town. Gideon obviously loves OSU and people in general and goes out of his way to make the world a better place. OSU Retirement Association

2018 OSURA Scholarship winner Phuong Uyen Nguyen.
OSURA (Oregon State University Retirement Association) and ALL (the Academy for Lifelong Learning) teamed up to organize a field trip to Portland. The main goal was to see the Oregon Historical Society’s exhibit “Oregon State University: A Legacy of Transformation,” featured from Feb. 10 to Sept. 9, 2018. Judy Ringle of ALL (and an OSU retiree) met with OSURA’s program committee co-chairs to discuss how we might do this. It was a good collaboration, one indication being that I cannot even remember who suggested it—it just doesn’t matter. Judy offered ALL’s help in making reservations and taking payments, as ALL has a ready-made format for it, and took on the task of reserving a bus. I agreed to make arrangements with the museum and check out Portland activities.

Linda Roth of the Society’s Education Department helped us choose a date and time. We decided on a Wednesday in spring would work for OSURA and ALL and chose May 2. We built in an hour and a half for lunch in the city, and thought suggestions and a map would be good. Don Hall loaned his Photoshop skills to our downtown Portland map while I checked out restaurants with help from two Portlanders and the web. Sunny skies on May 2 completed the picture.

Our bus left Corvallis at 9:40 a.m. and at 11:30 a.m. parked near the museum. We quickly set off to various lunch venues and at 1:00 p.m. we met with Linda Roth at the museum.

As it happened, we had a reunion, typical when Oregonians gather; Linda is an OSU alum and also Judy Ringle’s former teaching assistant. Linda introduced the spacious layout at the museum and suggested we also view “Racing to Change: Oregon’s Civil Rights Years” and “Catching Birds with a Camera: Finley, Bohlman, and the Photographs that Launched Oregon’s Conservation Movement,” both representing significant achievements that are also works in progress as, in many ways, does the OSU exhibit as well.

Organized as 150 stories, A Legacy of Transformation celebrates OSU’s 150 years. Some stories are about individuals and specific buildings or events while others deal with larger developments or processes. There are surprises too. My department, Anthropology, is in Waldo Hall. I’d served as Building Manager for several years and one of our students did an oral history interview with the building’s construction manager, so I thought I knew the building’s secrets. But I was wrong. I knew that the building served as a women’s dormitory in its early days but I didn’t know that Ida Kidder, Oregon College of Agriculture’s first professional librarian, died in Waldo Hall in 1920. I learned from the OHS display that she was a much loved staff member who took that post in 1908.

My guess is that every OSU student or staff member and every member of OSURA will have at least one unexpected experience, and likely more than one, when viewing the OHS exhibit.
Tour of Lonnie B. Harris Black Cultural Center: April 2018

Contributed by Terri Tower

An enthusiastic group of OSURA members toured the Lonnie B. Harris Black Cultural Center this past spring, continuing OSURA’s tradition to see the University’s student cultural centers.

We were warmly welcomed by Terrance Harris, the Lonnie B. Harris BCC Director, who guided us through the facility and talked about the BCC’s mission and programs. We also were introduced to a number of students in the lounge area, some of them peer facilitators who work with the Center’s programs. Highlights of the tour included viewing the unique artwork and design elements incorporated into the Center.

The Black Cultural Center was one of the first cultural resource centers established at Oregon State. Originally sharing space with Hispanic and Native American groups in the early 1970s, the BCC opened its own center in 1975 and named its building for Lonnie B. Harris, the first director of the Educational Opportunities Program at OSU. The original BCC building was moved to another location to make way for construction of this new center on the same site.
George Orwell’s, 1984: May 2018

Two plus two equals five. Two plus two equals five. Two plus two equals five.

That was the message drilled into the audience by a talented student cast in OSU Theater’s May production of George Orwell’s, 1984.

A dozen OSURA members gathered for remarks by Director Elizabeth Helman before the Friday May 18 performance of the play, an adaptation of Orwell’s well-known novel of a bleak and disturbing dystopian future in which Thought Police and Big Brother prevail.

Helman said in an earlier news release, “I hope we spark lively conversations about the parallels between Orwell’s world and our own contemporary issues regarding nationalism, constant surveillance, disputes over fact and truth the threat of fascism and propaganda.”

Following Helman’s remarks, OSURA members toured through the costume and props rooms in the basement of Withycombe Hall, amazed by all the props and stacks of furniture in the open basement, plus entire side rooms full of just women’s dresses, or men’s shirts; sport coats and slacks.
